Jamie Combee Novaes is a Senior Associate at Butler who practices in Liability, First-Party and Third-Party Coverage, and Extra-Contractual matters. Jamie had a wide array of work experience covering topics from education to insurance prior to Butler. She has continued to apply her legal knowledge, handling numerous cases in all phases of litigation.

Jamie obtained her Doctor of Jurisprudence, with honors, in 2013 from Stetson University College of Law. While in the honors program, she co-founded and served as editor of the Stetson Journal of Advocacy and the Law. Jamie also advocated on Stetson's nationally-ranked trial team and competed for the Moot Court Board, which selected her to serve as associate justice. During her time in school, she achieved numerous awards and accolades; served as a research and teaching assistant for Research & Writing, Evidence, and Trial Advocacy; earned the highest grade designation in Research & Writing and Constitutional Law; and was selected to serve on the Student Leadership Development Committee and Student Bar Association.

Before bringing her talents to the firm, Jamie interned at a litigation firm in Tampa and at the Chicago Federal Public Defender Program, which earned her the prestigious Judge William J. Campbell Intern-at-Law Award.
